Ben and I will attend the retreat next Friday but I will not be able to attend Thursday. We are attending the AFL-CIO briefing on Thursday day along with Secretary Solis. This is a very critical meeting with worker justice center leaders and funders.

Ben, is there an agenda and directions to the retreat place? Thanks.

Friends,

We have now met with all Center Directors to talk through and provide feedback on all your Strategic Plans. In the next few weeks, I am asking that each Center vet and get Departmental sign-off on their plans. If possible, it would be helpful if this sign-off could occur before the Sept. 16-17 training and retreat. On the first day of that meeting, we will discuss the big picture of the White House plans in coordination with your strategic plans. On the second day, one of the main elements of the agenda will be hearing from each Center about their plans.

Shortly after the training and retreat, I will be pulling the strategic plans together to making a presentation to the President of our planned activities and goals.

To that end, please work to get approval for your plans as soon as you can.

Many thanks,
Joshua

Hi Mara,

Just fyi -

Wage theft has become a national epidemic problem impacting low wage and immigrant workers. It means not getting paid for the hours you work, not getting overtime pay, or not getting paid at all. Misclassification means when an employer designates you as a contractor rather than as an employee so that they don't have to abide by wage and hour labor law.

Here's a NY Times editorial last year about it - <http://www.nytimes.com/2009/09/03/opinion/03thu2.html>. From a national study done on this issue by the Nat. Employment Law Project and the UCLA Institute for Research on Labor and Employment – Broken Laws, Unprotected Workers: Violation of Employment and Labor Laws in America's Cities (2010) cites – “Wage theft not only depresses the already meager earnings of low-wage workers, but also adversely impacts their communities and the local economies of which they are a part. More than 68% of our sample experiences at least one-pay related violation in the previous work week. The average worker lost $51, out of average weekly earnings of $339. Assuming a full-time work schedule, we estimate that these workers lost an average of $2,634 annually due to workplace violations, out of total earnings of $17,616. That translates into wage theft of 15 percent of earnings.”

Kim Bobo, the Director of Interfaith Worker Justice has written THE book on Wage Theft – Wage Theft in America. Why Millions of Working Americans Are Not Getting Paid- And What We Can Do About it (2009, The New Press).

On the health and safety side, 12-14 workers die on the job every day in the US and hundreds are injured every day, e.g., West Virginia mine disaster and Gulf Coast oil rig explosion. Sec. Solis says that no worker should have to die or be injured on the job.

I'll work on this and get it back to you later this week.

Thanks for getting back to me. Do you have any stats about wage theft issues and how common it is, where it is happening, etc. I also think because this is a relatively new idea in the lexicon, if we could explain more in simple terms what this exactly means. Like lay it out in paragraph form.

3/7/2011

I think that would help. And please put all prose in print-ready format- without abbreviations and in language you would like to see it printed.

Thanks so much!!

Hi Mara.

Here's my commentary for our two items for your tool-kit.

A pastor should care about worker protection/justice issues if his/her members and neighbors are not getting their just pay or are working in a hazardous work environment, e.g., wage theft, misclassification, health and safety issues. DOL's OSHA and Wage and Hour Division can help his/her members and neighbors understand what their rights as workers are.

A pastor should care about workforce development issues if his/her members are unemployed, underemployed or switching jobs. DOL's workforce development programs can help his/her members and neighbors connect with job training and employment opportunities.

Seigel, Ben - OSEC;

Dear colleagues-

Thanks to everyone who sent us your tool-kit items. I appreciate it. We are working to combine and edit them now. We could use one more thing from each Center on the tool-kit items.

3/7/2011

Please send me 1 short paragraph per action item describing why this area is an issue of importance that a local faith-based or community-based organization should care about.

We want to draw them in and some of these areas need to be better described. We want this to be an inspirational and inspire action- many of these pieces need to draw the reader in more. So for example describe why we should care about connecting kids to SNAP, or why we should set up a vets ministry, or why health community centers are a good thing.

Think about it from the perspective of a local pastor picking up this brochure and reading it for the first time, make your case to them why they should want to work on one of these areas.

Call me if you have any questions. Thanks everyone!

Welcoming Phil and Ben!

Friends,

It is my great pleasure to welcome Phil Tom and Ben Seigel to our team. Phil and Ben will be in our Center at the Department of Labor.

Phil joins us as the Director of the DOL Center. Phil previously served as associate for Small Church and Community Ministry for the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). He has also served as the denomination's associate for urban ministry.

I had the pleasure of interacting with Ben Seigel during his time at Seedco in New York City. Ben has been a thought-leader on workforce development and other issues facing low-income families at that excellent organization, and we pleased to bring his expertise and experience to DOL.

Feel free to welcome Phil and Ben by phone or email, or on the morning call tomorrow.

Subject: Weekly Update

Friday, October 15, 2010

Friends,

Hope you had a great week! I wanted to drop a quick line with an update on President Obama's work and our efforts here in the faith-based office.

Jobs and Infrastructure

You may have seen that President Obama recently announced a new proposal to invest in American infrastructure. The bottom line is this: our country is bleeding dollars because of aging roads, airports and other infrastructure. At the same time, China's building dozens of new airports and 170 new mass transit systems. We can either invest in our national infrastructure – and put people back to work– or keep lagging behind and losing money at the same time.

Adoption

This has been a big month for strengthening adoption and finding families for children who need them. Our Office recently hosted the Congressional Coalition on Adoption Institute's Angels in Adoption honorees, and we sponsored a webcast announcing an increase in the Adoption Tax Credit. Listen, the ATC is really great news for folks considering adoption. The new health care law bumped it up to $13,170 and made it "refundable," which means you can claim the credit regardless of how much you pay in taxes. Talk about things you didn't know about health reform! This will help tens of thousands of families and kids all across our country.

Why Cut Education?

Any middle class parent or student who's worried about paying college tuition will tell you that $2,500 makes a big difference when it comes time to pay the bills. I know I've certainly been in that position. That's why it's dumbfounding that Congress would consider cutting the "American Opportunity Tax Credit," along with other education funding. President Obama is fighting this tooth and nail; you can find out more here.

Advancing Interfaith Cooperation

I traveled to Rome this week to deliver a keynote address to the U.S. Embassy to the Holy See's Interfaith Action Conference. The conference was focused on how religious organizations can join together to address development, environmental and peace-building challenges. My main point is that we can retain our different beliefs but find some common principles that bind us together as human beings, and drive us to action. You can read the speech here; I'd love your feedback.

What Does Health Reform Mean?

Too often debates about big issues get caught up in politics and posturing, and health care in America is not immune. There are a couple bottom lines about the new health care law that I think folks should know. It really boils down to this:

- Insurance companies can't deny coverage to sick kids any more. They can't put a lifetime limit on your benefits. They can't cancel your policy without proving fraud. And they can't deny your claims without a giving you a chance to appeal.
- Now, for the first time Americans can receive free preventive services. Young folks can stay on their parent's health plan until age 26 (so no more worries about coverage dropping right after college). And you can use the nearest emergency room without paying a penalty – because the last thing you need to worry about in an emergency is a higher copay.

Common-sense reforms. More compassionate health care. I'd love any thoughts or questions folks have on this.

Picture of the Week

On the lighter side, I love this one: Lynne Silosky, a niece of Staff Sergeant Robert J. Miller, curtsying with First Lady Michelle Obama during a meeting in the Oval Office. Later, Obama awarded Staff Sergeant Miller the Medal of Honor posthumously for his heroic actions in Afghanistan.

Friends, hope you have a great weekend and are able to get some rest. We've recently added some new folks and fixed a couple problems with our list; if at any point you'd like to stop receiving this, just let me know.

All my best,

Joshua
